I Wonder Why.

BY HOPE ARNOLD.

I wonder why this world's good things Should fall in such unequal shares; Why some should taste of all the joys,
And others only feel the cares!

I wonder why the sunshine bright Should fall in paths some people tread, While others shiver in the shade Of clouds that gather over head!

I wonder why the trees that hang So full of luscious fruit should grow Only where some may reach and eat, While others faint and thirst go!

Why should sweet flowers bloom for some,
For others only thorns be found?
And some grow rich from fruitful earth, While others till but barren ground?

I wonder why the hearts of some Overflow with joy and happiness While others go their lonely way Unblest with naught of tenderness!

I wonder why the eyes of some Should never be moistened with a tear, While others weep from morn till night Their hearts all crushed with sorrow here!

Ah! well we may not know indeed The ways the wherefores of each life; But this we know—there's One who sees And watches through joy or strife

Each life its mission here fulfils, And only He may know the end;
And loving Him we can be strong Through storms or sunshine He may send.

REMINISCENCES

OF THE

COUNTY OF GREENVILLE.

BY EX-GOVERNOR D. F. PERRY.

JOHN BELTON O'NEALL.

John Belton O'Neall, Chief Justice, of South Carolina, was a citizen of Greenville for many years in the latter part of his life. He purchased a valuable farm on South Tyger River, fifteen miles above the City of Greenville.—

This farm, in the early settlement of Greenville, had belonged to Col.

John Thomas, a distinguished officer of the American Revolution, and his remains lie buried there. It was afterwards purchased by Judge Edwards, of the County Court, where he lived for a great many years, and died. Judge O'Neall likewise owned a valuable plantation in Newberry District, which he inherited from a maternal uncle, after whom he was named. He resided on his Newberry plantation in the winter, and came to Greenville in the summer.

He was greatly respected and beloved by his neighbors in Greenville. No public man in South Carolina has left behind him, a purer or more unblemished character than Chief Justice O'Neall. He had none of the faults or foibles, which sometimes are found in the character of our greatest men.—

He was, in the language of General

Harry Lee, describing General

Marion, "Pure all over." By nature he was warm hearted, generous and confiding. Like General Marion, he never deserted a friend, however much that friend may have erred. There are few men in South Carolina who have done more good and less evil than

John Belton O'Neall. His organ of destructiveness was very strong whilst those of conscientiousness and veneration were equally developed. Hence, he made war all his life, against every species of immorality, dishonesty, vice and crime. His organ of combativeness without conscientiousness and veneration would have made him a dangerous man. But he had a well balanced head, and therefore his strong developments made him a noble, model man, moralist,

Christian, patriot and philanthropist. His intellect was of a high order, and his memory was wonderful. His industry and perseverance were unsurpassed throughout his long and honorable life, in every pursuit or undertaking in which he engaged. I once heard a gentleman say to him, that he had no doubt his ambition was to be seated on the bench, amidst the trial of some great cause in court. Whilst presiding on the circuit bench, no one ever mistook his charge to the jury, or doubted which side he took in the trial of a case. His clear discriminating mind and unerring judgment saw at once, the true points of the case and its justice. He never failed to boldly express his opinions to the jury. In the trial of a slander case at Spartanburg, he said to the plaintiff's attorney after the evidence closed, "It is well for your client that he is not on his trial for the larceny imputed to him by the defendant, and for which he has brought his action of slander." I heard a distinguished lawyer say that if a corrupt judge were to take sides in the trial of a case as Judge O'Neall did, he would be shot before he finished his circuit.

But every one had such confidence in O'Neall's purity, that no offense was taken at his charges, although wrong. This, however, was very seldom. I remember once opening my case to the jury with a statement of what I expected to prove, when Judge O'Neall promptly said, "if that is your case, it is not worth while to introduce any testimony, for I shall charge the jury to find against
